PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 10.—"The Descent from the Cross," which arterities consider Rembrandt's greatest religious painting, has been added to the Joseph E. Widener collection and is now hung in one of the galleries in Lynnewood Hail, the Widener residence in Elkins Park. The picture was acquired in Europe last July by Mr. Widener, who went abroad and personally brought it to this country.

The Widener collection is probably now the greatest in the United States and is especially rich in Rembrandts. It is believed that he has more of this artist's fine paintings than are to be found in any other collection outside of Holland. He has "The Mill," regarded by many art critics as the world's greatest landscape; "St. Paul," which he acquired from the Lord Wimbone collection, and Rembrandt's self portrait, besides many others. In the whole collection there are now thirteen Rembrandts and the connoisseur regards the most recent purchase as rounding out his list of world art treasures.

The Descent From the Cross was put

The Descent From the Cross was put on sale at Christie's in London early last July and was bought by F. Kleinberger of New York. It was then bought for the Von Gans collection at Frankfort, and later acquired by an agent for Mr. Widener. No information as to the cost of the painting has been made public, but it is generally believed in art circles that Mr. Widener paid about $500,000 for it. The signature states that Rembrandt painted it in 1651.

Mr. Widener is said to have paid $500,000 for The Mill, which he acquired several years ago. He is also said to have paid about $800,000 for the two Youssupoff portraits of a man and a woman by Rembrandt, acquired last year. He also has Rembrandt's The Circumcision, which came from the collection of Lord Spencar of Althorpe.

In The Descent From the Cross the body of the Saviour is the commanding figure and from it the other figures, about ten in all, are illumined. The mother of Christ'has swooned in the arms of another woman.

Under the new program committees of artists in foreign countries, acting with Mr. Saint-Gaudens as the tie breaking member of the various committees, will select paintings judged by them to be the best and most representative of the different schools of the fatherlands. These paintings then will be forwarded to the committee of award, which, as usual, will sit in Pittsburgh. "This pian will eliminate the natural objection to arbitrary selection, voiced by many artists of the world," said Mr. Saint-Gaudens, "and for this and other reasons the next international exhibition here, we believe, will be equal if not superior to any in the past. Already artists of foreign countries are at work forming their committees."
